

MACA Code of Ethics

1. The counselor shall give precedence to professional responsibility over personal interest.
2. The counselor shall not discriminate because of race, color, religion, age, sex, or national ancestry, and will work to prevent and eliminate such discrimination in rendering service in work assignments and in employment practices.
3. The counselor shall respect the basic human rights of all clients and shall refrain from unethical practices in treating clients.
4. The counselor shall use any information gained in professional relationships in a reasonable manner.
5. The counselor shall not take charge of or prescribe for another counselor's client during treatment (except in an emergency) until the case has been formally dismissed or consultation requested.
6. The counselor shall respect the findings, views, and actions of colleagues and shall use appropriate channels to express judgment in these matters.
7. The counselor will show personal regard toward the law of the land with the full knowledge that illegal actions could jeopardize his or her professional standards.
8. The counselor shall abstain from the usage of drugs and/or alcohol while on the job; total abstinence shall be the norm for professionals who are recovering chemical dependents.
9. The counselor recognized the fact that professional practice requires professional education.
10. The counselor shall clearly distinguish, in public, between statements and actions as an individual and as a representative of this organization.
11. The counselor accepts responsibility for working toward creation and maintenance of conditions within agencies and institutions that enable other counselors to conduct themselves in accordance with this code.
